

Streamlined Hollowe'en Party Puts New Fun in Old Holiday

Progressive Dinner and Reverse Games Provide Modern Zip

By MARIAN YOUNG
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—Progressive parties (they're becoming popular again, anyway) lend themselves admirably to modernized, streamlined Halloween celebrations.

In the first place, the idea itself is ice-breaking. Not even the shyest guest can stand offish for longer than it takes to finish one course at the first house. By the time he arrives at the second house, he'll feel at ease with at least half a dozen other guests—namely those with whom he was jammed into a car or taxi on the trip over.

Secondly, the progressive party doesn't put any great amount of responsibility on extra work on any one hostess. After she has solved the decoration problem, she has only one course to plan and worry about.

Divide Decoration Job

By calling one meeting of the four or five hostesses, the decoration schemes can be figured out fairly simply. Hostess number one might do her

PHILADELPHIA—High stakes with no holds barred, have given Pennsylvania's political battle a rough-and-tumble tempo.

For Republicans, Pennsylvania is a large-scale reclamation project. For four years they have been a minority part in a state whose Republicanism for decades was taken for granted. If they can reclaim it from the "little New Deal" of Governor George H. Earle, the immediate spoils are 27,000 state jobs. And victory might help win the 36 electoral votes—the second largest block in the country—in 1940.

Earle seeks the seat of U. S. Senator James J. Davis. Stocky "Puddler Jim," long a Republican wheelhorse, has no desire to yield. Earle's Democratic ticket mate is Lawyer Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh, contesting for the governorship with Arthur H. James, superior court judge.

Labor Leaders Differ

Senator Davis got the name "Puddler Jim" while working in the steel mills. President Green of AFL endorsed the Davis candidacy, but the state AFL, along with CIO, declared for Earle and Jones. Davis has a New Deal voting record stronger than many conservative Democrats in the senate.

The issue is not only the New Deal, but whether Earle's version of it has been applied honestly. Republican cries of graft and purchased legislation have churned up a turmoil.

Democrats say those charges are made for political effect. And they hammer at Judge James for holding on to his courtship while campaigning for the governorship.

High on the general staff of the Democratic forces is Senator Joseph Guffey, who appears to have forgiven the Earle faction for defeating him in the primary the state backed by him and CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis.

G. O. P. Men Long in Office

Political experience is heavily on the side of the Republicans. Davis has been elected senator twice. Before that he was secretary of labor for 10 years. Gubernatorial candidate James was a district attorney and lieutenant governor before election to the bench. He's red-haired, a vigorous campaigner, and was an anthracite miner in his youth. James won a landslide primary victory over Gifford Pinchot, twice governor.

Earle never was a candidate until he ran for the governorship four years ago. Born and reared in wealth, his diversions were polo and hunting. When President Roosevelt started his public career by naming him minister to Austria in 1933.

Earle's running mate Jones never before has been a candidate for an important political office.

Hope Banker in Race for Alderman From Ward
Four

Syd McMath, assistant cashier of First National bank, Thursday announced as a candidate for alderman from Ward four, subject to the action of the city democratic primary election November 30.

Mr. McMath is well-known to the voters of Hope. He is asking public office for the first time. He feels he is well-qualified and if elected pledges to discharge the duties of alderman in a business-like manner.

In formally announcing as a candidate, he asks the support and vote of the electors in the coming primary election.

Mr. McMath, for the past 22 years, has been connected with the banking business, all of which time has been spent here in Hope.

The area and population of India are roughly equal to those of the whole of Europe, excluding Russia.

Trying to pin the donkey on the tail is even more hilarious fun than the game in its original form.

House in witches only, leaving jack-o'-lanterns, apples, pumpkins and ghosts for the others. She could dress as a witch herself, substitute witches' peaked hats for all her lampshades, put witches of every size and type on the mantel, the draperies and the staircase, and use large witch cut-outs for the table.

Hostess number two (she draws the main course—poor woman) could take jack-o'-lanterns, apples, pumpkins, and artificial, throughout the house. A casserole dish can be served in a jack-o'-lantern which has been seen in two so that the lower half holds the dish and the upper section forms a cover.

Stuffed peppers look Halloween-ish if eyes, nose and mouth are cut into the side of each pepper before baking. Carrots, squash, yellow turnips, sweet potatoes, corn and yellow tomatoes are naturals, of course. Jack-o'-lantern faces can be carved on the olives or the baked potatoes.

The hostess who draws the salad course might carry out some kind of apple motif, serving cider and Waldorf salad of unpeeled, red apples, celery and nuts, and decorating her house with huge bowls and long strings of apples. Also giving the inevitable bobbing-for-apples tub a prominent place in the room for games.

The black cat course (dessert and coffee) ought to afford imaginative hostess number four plenty of chance to decorate her house attractively and serve a really interesting dessert. She, however, must plan the games. Having run from house to house, eating a course here and another there, the guests will want to spend the rest of the evening in the house where the last course is served.

Games? Games?—?? Well, let's see.

Turn About Games

How about playing all the old familiar ones backwards for a change? Or varying them until they seem new and more fun?

Musical chairs minus the chairs—with the guests scrambling for marked places on the floor might be an idea.

A halved jack-o'-lantern holding a cresset brings the Halloween spirit right to the table.

The strings which always have led from the front door to the cellar where cold gusts of wind shot down your neck from far corners, clummy hands clutched at your arms and ghastly ghosts leered from squeaking windows might lead instead—to the attic—well lighted, with the floor waxed for dancing.

You can't very well reverse the bobbing-for-apples ordeal unless you want to put the host in the tub of water and throw the apples at him. But you can pin the donkey on the tail instead of pinning the tail on the donkey. Or ask the guests to come dressed as an idea rather than in typical, by now hackneyed, Halloween costumes. Camden Panthers

Old Rivalry to Be Renewed Here at 8 o'Clock Friday Night

POINT FOR BATTLE

Benton, Jonesboro to Face Tough Opposition in Conference

By LEONARD ELLIS

Couch Foy Hammons Thursday prepared his Hope High School football team to meet an inspired pack of Camden Panthers here Friday night in the renewal of an old rivalry that has existed for many years.

"I understand that Camden has been working over-time for this game and are coming here determined to upset us. Camden shows a remarkable amount of stamina and fight against the Bobcats despite the odds and I look for a battle just as hard as the one last week with Nashville," Hammons said.

"With our fullback, Joe Eason, crippled and out of the game, we naturally will be handicapped and weakened, especially on the offense. Eason is definitely out of the game and will not suit-up," the coach said.

Change in Lineup

Other members of the team are in shape with the exception of Phil Keith, substitute back, who received a knee injury in Wednesday's practice. Keith, however, is expected to alternate in the backfield with Sonny Murphy and Bill Tom Bundy in the place left vacant by the injured Joe Eason.

Bobby Ellen, center, will probably be called on to do most of the punting. The annual banquet given to the squad by the Young Business Men's association before the Camden battle has been postponed until next Thursday night due to the illness in the family of W. S. Atkins, newly-elected president of the association.

Mr. Atkins has been called to Barnes

Gas Consumers to Get Added Service

Company Introduces Malodorant to Detect Leaks in Gas Lines

Enlarging upon its service to gas consumers and in an effort to eliminate the hazards caused by undetected escape of natural gas, the Arkansas Louisiana Gas company, on Monday, October 31, begins to introduce a malodorant into its lines supplying Hope and Springhill.

The odorizing product is known as Calodorant and gives a distinguishing odor to the gas that is easily detected by the nose.

The cost of Calodorant equipment and service will be borne entirely by the company for the benefit of gas consumers in this community. Gas company engineers pointed out that the odorant is used only to permit the detection of leaks. It has no effect on the efficiency of the gas as a fuel and is consumed entirely in burning. When the gas is burned no odor is noticeable and it gives no nauseating fume.

Use of Calodorant, which has a pungent but not unpleasant odor, will cost nothing for gas they do not use—that is, gas that escapes through leaky house pipes or improperly adjusted appliances, but will call attention to any accumulation of a large amount of gas in a home or any other building.

Neither unpleasant nor nauseating, the odorant is harmless but extremely penetrating, affording immediate detection of leaks. Calodorant is a volatile oil which is added to the natural gas in vapor form in just sufficient quantity to give it an odor. It is consumed entirely in burning, and does not affect the heating value of the gas at all. Its odor is penetrating but not nauseating.

Since local consumers may not detect leaks of gas which, before the introduction of Calodorant, was almost odorless, Arkansas Louisiana Gas company officials believe the new process will enable customers to obtain fuller benefits from the gas they pay for, with possible hazards of leaking gas reduced to an absolute minimum.

J. K. Sale, Arkansas Louisiana Gas company local manager, says this new service is being inaugurated as a protection to customers and he urges that all gas consumers cooperate in this safety movement by notifying the company when they encounter the odor of leaking gas about their premises.

Mr. Sale called attention to the company's advertisement appearing in today's paper and requests anyone desiring further information to call the Arkansas Louisiana Gas company of five.

Synod's Meeting

Will Convene There Next October—Texas Is Invited

ASK GAMBLING PROBE

Synod Urges Greater Consideration Be Given to Marriage

The Arkansas Synod of the Presbyterian church concluded its 86th annual meeting here at 2:30 p. m. Thursday after selecting Texarkana as the site of the next meeting place.

The date was announced as October 17-19. The Synod issued an invitation to the Texas Synod to meet on the Texas side of Texarkana at the same time.

Before adjourning its three-day session here, the Synod went on record as favoring an investigation into statewide gambling.

The Synod discussed marriage and divorce and recommended that greater consideration be given to marriage, rather than to mending the fence after it was broken down by divorce.

Refinance College Debt

The debt committee reported that the total debt of the organization had been reduced to $50,000 which is outstanding against Arkansas college, Presbyterian school located at Batesville.

Adequate provisions have been worked out to refinance the total debt and to retire it within the next 10 years.

A special committee headed by Dr. M. A. Boggs of Hot Springs as chairman was appointed to arrange for an evangelistic campaign among Presbyterian churches in Arkansas during the next year.

Devotional exercises Thursday were led by Dr. B. C. Boney of Warren.

The Synod, during the morning session, heard an interesting address by Dr. Kirk Mosely of Yenching, China, formerly of Texarkana, who spoke on foreign missions and church work during war times.

The Rev. Harry G. Goodykoontz of Fayetteville, made an earnest plea for consideration of the religious needs of college students. He said the campus is the church's greatest home mission field.

Dr. H. H. McCaslin, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Memphis, Tenn., and one of the outstanding preachers attending the meeting here, called upon the Synod Wednesday night to put forth greater effort in home missionary work, using as his topic "the present day challenge of the unfinished work of home missions."

Students Are Heard

Miss Charlotte Eckels of Hot Springs student in Henderson State Teachers College, and Basil Hicks of Batesville, Arkansas College student, addressed the Synod Wednesday afternoon on behalf of the Synod's young people's council, pledging the support for an added emphasis upon evangelistic work during the coming year.

They spoke in connection with the report of the committee on religious education given by the Rev. Roy Davis of Wynot. The Synod gave them a rising vote of appreciation.

The committee on Sabbath and family religion gave the most stirring report in years, calling the Christian people to a new effort in Sabbath observance. The report was given by the Rev. Alexander Henry of Newport.

Mrs. David W. McMillan of Arkadelphia, Synodical president of the woman's auxiliary, made a report on the woman's work, revealing that much had been accomplished.

The board of trustees of Arkansas College, Batesville reported substantial increase in enrollment this year over last year.

And So: 'Model Mate' Is Free in Slaying

"I feel swell," gasped happy "model husband" Rudolf Sikora, pictured after a Chicago jury acquitted him of a charge that he murdered Edward Solomon, the man who stole the love of his young wife with pretty words and suave manner.

Equally jubilant was Sikora's mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Boehme, who rushed to kiss the man of whom the jury foreman said: "He acted in a way that should protect the sanctity of the American home." She shed with Sikora throughout the trial.

But her daughter, Sikora's pretty 22-year-old wife Margaret, was not so pleased. "I expected it," she said, refusing to comment on the possibility of a reconciliation with the husband who calmly shot her lover dead on a Chicago street last summer.

Brick Union Chief Is Speaker Here

AFL Mass Meeting Scheduled Friday at City Hall Is Postponed

Local No. 699 of the United Brick & Clay Workers of America had as its guest at a meeting here Wednesday night, Frank Kiger, general organizer and international vice-president of the United Brick & Clay Workers Union.

He was accompanied by J. E. Cooper, president of local No. 602 of Malvern.

Both speakers addressed about 60 men on the organizations prospects and future plans.

Short addresses also were made by Willard Anderson, chairman and business agent of local No. 699, and William Hutchens, of the Beverage Dispensers organization and formerly with the local in Houston, Texas.

Eugene Curtis, of the Department of Labor, is expected in Hope Saturday to assist in adjusting problems of the United Brick & Clay Workers here, union members said.

Mr. Hutchens announced that an American Federation of Labor mass meeting originally scheduled Friday night at Hope city hall had been postponed one week.

U. S. to Defend Western World

Roosevelt Hits Persecution of Jews, and Warlike Threats

WASHINGTON.—(P)—President Roosevelt, in a virtually unprecedented condemnation of nations which suppress liberty, persecute Jews, and use threats of war to attain national ends, issued a warning Wednesday night that the United States would protect the Western Hemisphere from interference from abroad.

Speaking by radio from the oval room of the White House in connection with the New York Herald Tribune's forum on current affairs, Mr. Roosevelt added:

"And we affirm our faith that, whatever choice of way of life a people makes, that choice must not threaten the world with the disaster of war."

"The impact of such a disaster cannot be confined. It releases a flood-tide of evil emotions fatal to civilized living. That statement applies not to the Western Hemisphere alone but to the whole of Europe and Asia and Africa and the islands of the seas."

He declared that until foreign nations give the United States something more than mere verbal assurances that they desire disarmament—until disarmament discussions are actually started—this country must arm "to meet with success any application of force against us."

Found Karpis Out Too Late, She Says

Mrs. Goldstein Takes the Stand—3 of Defendants Are Set Free

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Grace Goldstein, auburn-haired mistress of Hot Springs prostitution houses, told federal district court Thursday the story of her association with the outlaw Alvin Karpis in 1935-36, denying there was a conspiracy to harbor him in the resort city in those years.

Mrs. Goldstein, in her early 30's, described by her attorney as Karpis' common-law wife, testified in the defense of herself and three former Hot Springs police officers charged by the government with conspiring to shield the gangster from arrest while he was being hunted for the 1934 kidnapping of Edward Bremer, St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. Goldstein told the jury that she lived with Karpis for five months before she knew his true identity, and "then did not know what to do about it except to go on as I had done."

Three Are Acquitted

LITTLE ROCK.—Federal Judge Trimble directed verdicts of not guilty for John Stover, manager of the Hot Springs airport; Mrs. A. C. Dyer, operator of a boat landing near Hot Springs; and Morris Loftis, caretaker at the boat landing in United States District Court late Wednesday, reducing the number of defendants in the Alvin Karpis harboring conspiracy trial to four.

The action came late in the afternoon after the government had rested its case. Judge Trimble overruled motions for directed verdicts for the other four defendants—Herbert (Dutch) Akers, former Hot Springs chief of detectives; Joseph Wakelin, former police chief; Cecil Brock, former police lieutenant; and Mrs. Grace Goldstein, Karpis' common law wife.

Sam Robinson, lawyer for Stover, and W. Henry Donham, lawyer for Mrs. Dyer and Loftis, moved successfully for release of their clients on the grounds that testimony presented by the government during the eight days of the trial had failed to establish that the three knew that Karpis was a fugitive wanted by the federal government and had failed to show any conspiracy on their part to protect Karpis.

In the case of Mrs. Dyer and Loftis, Judge Trimble remarked during a two-hour session in chambers while lawyers argued the motions for directed verdicts, that the government had introduced statements obtained from them which would be binding against them but it had failed to present direct testimony in corroboration. He said that previous rulings by higher courts held that no convictions could be obtained unless such admissions were supplemented by corroborative testimony.

On announcement of the rulings Mrs. Dyer, Loftis and Stover smiled broadly while friends rushed to extend congratulations. They retired immediately from the courtroom and walked slowly up the court corridor while friends put their arms around them.

America Protests Against Discriminatory Control of Exchange

"OPEN DOOR" CLOSED

Meanwhile, Japan Faces Long Job in Really Conquering China

By the Associated Press

The United States' foreign policy, asserted strongly in two separately declarations, Thursday brought worldwide repercussions.

One was a sharp note to Japan demanding that "unwarranted interference" with American rights in China be stopped.

The other was President Roosevelt's speech Wednesday night against "peace by fear."

A note to Tokyo, delivered October 6, but disclosed by Washington only Thursday, bluntly called on Japan to observe the "open door" policy in China, and listed a long series of violations on American business and property rights.

Three Demands

The note made three specific demands:

1. Discontinuance of discriminatory exchange control and other measures discriminatory against American interests in Japanese-controlled areas of China.
2. Discontinuance of any monopoly or any preference adverse to legitimate American trade and industry in those areas.
3. Discontinuance of interference by Japanese authorities in China, with American property and other rights.

The note was not published in Tokyo; and, despite an explicit request for an early reply, a Japanese foreign office spokesman said no date had been set for responding.

In China, the Japanese conquerors of Canton and Hankow pushed ahead toward three new objectives:

1. To scatter the Chinese troops retreating from Hankow.
2. To occupy the 685 miles of railroad between the fallen provisional capital and Canton, captured South China metropolis.
3. To penetrate the areas between the spoke-like columns stretching inland into central China.

Conquest Just Started

SHANGHAI, China.—(P)—With the capture of Hankow and Canton now completed the Japanese conquest of China's great industrial and commercial centers, the Japanese still face years of struggle if they are to pacify China completely.

Japanese advisers said formal entry into the Wuhan cities—Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang—was scheduled for November 3, birthday of the late Japanese Emperor Meiji, grandfather of Emperor Hirohito.

With the occupation of Hankow the Japanese have taken over most of the major lines of communication and the richest cities and towns through 13 provinces of about 575,000 square miles and with a population of about 200,000,000 or nearly half the population of China.

Foreign observers emphasized that the Japanese penetration has been only along major railways, highways, rivers linking the principal cities, leaving vast interior areas still unoccupied and unconquered. Along these pathways of conquest the zone of Japanese authority has been nestled as only 30 miles wide.

A Great Part of Every War Is Fought by Physicians and Surgeons

Without the medical profession wars would be so destructive of mankind that the world of living men might well cease to exist.

The horrors of modern warfare are so great that the human being might be unable to endure them were it not for the contributions of medicine. Indeed, it has often been suggested that the medical profession itself by a unanimous refusal to participate in any war, whether characterized as righteous or as the saving of democracy, could end all wars.

In any war it is the doctor who must find out first which men are physically fit for service, and make the others fit when repairs and rehabilita-

MURDER TO MUSIC

COST OF CHARACTERS
MYRNA DOMBEY—Acrobat.
Wife of the sensational swing band leader.
ROBERT TAIT—Acrobat.
Paper photographer—detective.
ANNIE LESTER—Myrna's closest friend.
DANNIS FREELY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Yesterday Tait is introduced to glamorous Nelda Starr, who asks him why the swing band never plays "The Cat's Meow" any more.

CHAPTER XXII

"DO you mean," Nelda Starr asked, "that the band won't play 'The Cat's Meow' any more?" She seemed genuinely affected by Tait's news.

"Perhaps in a year or two—but by that time, of course, it may not be popular at all."

"I've been wanting to hear it all evening." Her glance swept Archie Mackey and Tait. "I've a record of it at my apartment. Let's go there and have a cocktail and hear the song."

Mackey made a protesting gesture. "Listen, beautiful lady, I have to work. I've been to four night clubs already. It's almost midnight, and I haven't got material for a line! You take Bob and run along."

"Would you like to come, Mr. Tait?"

"Very much," Bob Tait said. But there was misgiving in his heart when he said it. Nelda Starr was a strange young woman. He could well imagine what worry and anguish she caused old and dignified Aaron Starr. Certainly she did not get along, else why would she forsake the Starr mansion for an apartment of her own? And her preoccupation with swing widened. "I'd like to hear it now."

"Oh, but it will!" The girl's eyes music and the song "The Cat's Meow" were almost abnormal. Tait's mind went back to his visit with Leonard Macy when the latter had insisted that the addicts of swing—the jitterbugs and the lickers—were a study in abnormality. Tait had scoffed at the notion then, because Macy's inference had been that Myrna belonged to that classification. Yet here before him was a girl utterly different from Myrna Dombey. Here was a girl, neurotic and finely-spun, upon whom the world of swing had undoubtedly had effect.

DID she actually want to hear the record of "The Cat's Meow"? So badly that she must leave the Golden Bowl? Or was the invitation, issued to a man she had never met before, simply a subtle build-up toward asking for a spot with the band? The questions swam through Tait's tired brain as he helped Nelda Starr with her luxurious evening wrap in the foyer of the Golden Bowl.

"I have a car outside," Nelda said.

That, Bob Tait was to discover, was a masterpiece of understatement. He followed her out under the spacious marquee of the Pacific Plaza, saw the doorman fuss with his signal box the moment he recognized Nelda. Almost immediately there rolled to the curb a small car that was like a jewel in the world of automotive engineering.

It was no larger than the smallest of light stock cars, but the body was of special make and the finish was bright and flawless. The attendant left the wheel and stood at attention while Nelda slid herself into the driver's seat. Slightly bewildered, Tait climbed in beside her.

"Some little bus," he said. "What is it?"

She told him the name of the engine and chassis, a name familiar to every driver in the world. "I designed the body myself—in the rough, of course. And Dad had it built for me. That was before we had our latest argument."

"I see..." Tait withheld a desire to turn her over his knee and spank her. The special body, which her father "had built" for her, must have cost several times the price of an average car. Surprisingly Tait studied her profile, and when he did so he forgot his instinct to punish her as a parent might punish a child. This Nelda Starr was a grown and beautiful young woman. She was wise, too wise indeed for man, as Archie Mackey had hinted. And Tait felt sure, she was more than that. Nelda Starr was dangerous.

HE could no longer detect the faint perfume which had revealed her to him among all that crowd in the Golden Bowl. His sense of smell had grown accustomed to it now. Yet, he told himself, it was Nelda who wore that perfume. It was that perfume he had caught on that night when death had missed him by the merest fluke—the anxiety of a taxi driver to be of service. Had the attacker been this slight girl beside him? And was even her seemingly harmless invitation to night really another attempt to take his life? It was not a comfortable feeling, but it was with Bob Tait as he rode through town with the fragile, lovely Nelda in her car that had been built for her, and nobody else.

"That perfume you use," he said suddenly. "It's—so unusual. May I ask what it is?"

Nelda Starr laughed. "If it isn't unusual," she said, "someone is going to get into a lot of trouble. It doesn't have a name—unless you want to call it Nelda Starr—because it was made especially for me."

"Somehow," said Tait, "it suits you. It's enticing and yet—well, dangerous."

She turned her gaze to him. "Dangerous?"

"Yes. Isn't that what you want it to be?"

Nelda Starr was silent a moment. "I suppose so." Then: "You know, that's curious that you should say that."

"Curious? You mean that I should think that your perfume gives a hint of danger?"

She nodded. "Yes. Lud Dombey told me that one day."

SOMEHOW the remark startled Tait. Even though he told himself not to be a fool he experienced a queer chill. "It did prove dangerous, didn't it, for Lud Dombey?" That was, he knew, a reckless remark to make. But if Nelda Starr received any connotation beyond the words themselves she gave no sign of it. She only said, "Poor Lud."

"You liked him a lot, didn't you?" Tait asked.

"I was in love with him, if that's what you mean."

"Not with his music?"

She made a turn into another street with unnecessary vigor. "I don't care for men who treat me like a child, Mr. Tait. They remind me of my father."

"I'm sorry. But it does strike me that your father has been—well, rather lavish."

She shrugged. "Of course he's given me things. Like this silly car. When I really wanted to have something—something that meant everything to me, he'd never see it my way. When I told him I wanted to be a singer in a night club he practically died."

"I think that's a very normal reaction. Singing in a night club is a tough grind—and not all the patrons are the best, you know."

Nelda Starr didn't answer. She had slid the little car alongside a curb which fronted a towering apartment building. Silently Tait followed her inside, into the automatic lift. Since leaving the car she had said not a word and the next thing Tait knew they were standing in front of a door while Nelda Starr fumbled with the lock. At last she swung the door wide, and Tait looked beyond. There, past the little hallway, stood Harris Rogers!

STORIES IN STAMPS

Forty Years of Radium For Humanity

PIERRE CURIE returned to the university where he had labored as a student, the Sorbonne of Paris, to begin his first professorship in physics, and almost at once he launched extensive research in electricity, the magnetic properties of bodies at different temperatures, and similar subjects.

His work led him to the acquaintance of Marie Sklodowska of Warsaw. She had received her early training under her eminent father, but had become involved in the students' revolutionary organization and found it advisable to leave her native country. So she had taken a scientific degree in Paris. In 1895 she married Pierre Curie.

Very shortly the couple attracted attention to their work in radio-activity. In 1896, Henri Becquerel discovered the radioactive properties of uranium, further stimulating their research. Feverishly then they plunged into new experiments, and in November, 1898, the Curies obtained polonium and radium from pitchblende which they had subjected to a "very laborious process of fractionation." In subsequent years they did much to make use of the great property of radium and to place it at the disposal of a waiting humanity.

For this great work the Curies were honored repeatedly. In 1906 Professor Curie was run down by a dray and killed in Paris. Mme. Curie then succeeded him as professor at the Paris university, went on to win more distinction. The famous scientists are honored here on a current French stamp marking 40 years of radium achievement.

He Has Outlived Prospective Mourners

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa.—(AP)—George Wright, 70-year-old bachelor attorney, has called off plans he made for his wake because he is still very much alive and the friends he invited ten years ago are either dead or living in other parts of the country. Wright took out "wake" insurance maturing October 31, 1938. J. C. Hansen, the trustee, died recently. "Instead of my old friends making merry at my wake," said Wright, "I have attended the funerals of all but a few of them."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

AUTUMN PICTURES

Silhouette snaps of work on the farm are but one type of autumn picture opportunity. Note the effectiveness of the low viewpoint.

A FEW years back, most folks stopped taking pictures at the close of the summer season. Now, however, autumn has become one of the best and busiest snapshot seasons. Better cameras, faster films, and the natural charm of fall outdoors, make end-of-summer one long picture-whirl for the camera fan.

Stay-at-homes don't know what they're missing. There's a picture-subject at every fence-corner in this changing season. Fields are busy—crops are being harvested and late fruit gathered in. The weather is grand for hiking, with a camera slung over your shoulder and a pocket full of film. There is warm color and atmosphere in the landscape, richness in the cloud-massed skies, and grandeur in the autumn sunsets—a challenge to any camera. Record autumn fully in pictures, and you will have a snapshot collection worthy of an album all its own. Tell the complete story—the season's change, the harvest, all the details that make autumn different.

Emphasize the transition, showing the decline of the year, the promise of cold weather to come. Falling leaves, wind-tossed corn silhouetted against a cloudy sky, plump pumpkins lying among the shocks of corn already cut, and horses or machinery pictures against the background of a riotous sunset... all are good. There are literally thousands of opportunities, everywhere. On an autumn hike or outing, let one of the girls in your party stand on a ridge, with the wind blowing her scarf and hair—and picture her with the blue sky as background. There's appeal in such snapshots. When there are magnificent clouds, slip a color filter over the camera lens to make them stand out against the blue sky. Use the filter, too, in picturing distant scenes, and far-away objects will show up more clearly in your pictures.

Depend on autumn for interesting pictures—keep your camera busy—and you won't be disappointed. Now, as the picture year has four seasons, and this is one of the best.

You Need Make No Bones About Serving Skull Cookies at a Hallowe'en Party

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

Cookies must be invited to every informal party. So let's toss up a batch for Hallowe'en and make them something to water at.

Skull and Crossbone Cookies
(About 2 1/2 dozen)
Dough: 1 cup butter, 2 cups granulated sugar, 2 eggs, 1/2 cup thick creamed pumpkin, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 6 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 teaspoons mace.

Filling: 1/2 cups cooked prunes, 1 cup cubed orange, 1 cup liquid in which prunes were cooked, 1 cup chopped nut meats, 6 tablespoons butter, 6 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons cinnamon.

Dough: Cream butter, add sugar and cream thoroughly. Add beaten eggs, pumpkin and flavoring and beat. Add flour sifted with salt, soda and spice and mix. Divide into pieces of convenient size to handle, place on floured board, add sufficient flour to make rolling easy, and roll out thin. Cut with floured cookie cutter into rather large rounds.

From one-half of rounds, cut small round holes for eyes, a slit for a nose and a gash for a mouth. Place on cookie sheet. Pull "mouth" down in "face" rounds to give an open mouth appearance.

Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) 12 to 14 minutes. Roll crossbones from thin lengths of cookie dough, making ends thick and rounded and bake.

Filling: Pit prunes and cut into small pieces. Combine all ingredients in a saucepan and stir until well blended. Bring to a boil and cook and stir until very thick (about 5 minutes); cool.

Sprinkle plain cookie rounds with prune filling and cover with "face" rounds. Frost with pale butter and sugar icing, frosting around eyes, nose and mouth. Frost ends of crossbones and place under each "skull" on serving plate.

Keep the menu simple yet sturdy. Have one large center dish of a hot food, such as highly flavored baked beans, spaghetti and ham in casserole.

Here's good fun and good eating for the Hallowe'en party—fruit-filled cookies that look like skulls and crossbones.

or a platter with stacks of steaming frankfurters piled on it.

Salad is always welcome, but celery, olives, radishes, carrot strips can take its place and require less service. Assorted breads, sliced and buttered, or small hot biscuits, buttered, cookies, doughnuts, individual pumpkin pies, bowls of autumn fruits, especially apples, yellow candies, popcorn, unlimited supplies of hot coffee, fresh cider or ginger ale will complete the hearty feast for the witches, black cats and spooks who have a way of eating like hungry human beings on Hallowe'en.

Helps for Housewives

When buying bone roasts, be sure the butcher sends you the bones even if they have been removed. The bones can be used for making soups and stock for stews.

Here is a recipe for a popular peppermint ice cream. Soak for half an hour, one-third of a pound of peppermint stick candy and one cup of cream. Fold in one cup of whipped cream and freeze four hours in the mechanical refrigerator. Or cover securely in mold and bury four hours in five parts of chopped ice and one part coarse salt.

Egg custard is often served as a topping for soups. Mix two egg yolks, two tablespoons of milk and a few grains of salt and paprika. Pour a one-fourth inch layer into a shallow pan. Bake in a pan of hot water in a slow oven until the custard sets. Cool and cut out tiny shapes with vegetable cutter. Serve two to a cup or bowl of soup.

If your carpet sweeper squeaks, apply oil on a feather or from a small oil can. Use the oil on the bearings and around the wheels. Then run the sweeper over a paper to catch any surplus oil so it won't drip on your rug.

Set the children to blowing soap bubbles on your next rainy day. A little glycerine added to warm soapy water will increase the size and number of the bubbles.

NEW YORK.—(P)—The champion Yankees made room Wednesday for their two minor league farmhands, Clouting Charles Keller and Belting

Does Bladder Irritation
WAKE YOU UP? Its not normal. Its nature's warning "Danger Ahead." Your 2c back if this 4-day test does not help nature flush excess acid and other wastes from the kidneys. Excess acids can cause the irritation resulting in getting up nights, frequent or scanty flow, burning, backache or leg pains. Just say Bukets (25c) to any druggist. Buddy Rosar, in a straight player swap with the St. Louis Browns. They sent Myril Hoag, one of the game's best throwing outfielders and Catcher Joe Gleen, who hits a long ball, handles pitchers well, but is slow a-foot, to the Browns. In return, they received Oral Hildebrand, one of the Browns' steady pitchers last season, and Colonel (Buster) Mills, late of the Boston Red Sox.

The details, however, are only more or less incidental to the fact that the move "cleans house" in the fly-chasing and back-stopping departments, thereby permitting the permanent importation of the Newark Bears' youngsters who finished one-two in the 1938 International League batting race.

Fresh up from the University of Maryland campus, Keller won the league's batting crown in 1937 and followed it up this year by finishing first behind Rosar's .387 mark. Rosar has been catching in the Yankee farm chain for two or three years, and was up for a tryout with the world champions last spring.

Prescott Wolves to Meet Bearden

Curly Wolves Seeking Revenge for 28-0 Setback of Last Year

PRESCOTT, Ark. — Seeking their fifth win in eight starts, and trying to regain top form which brought them four victories, the Curly Wolves will journey to Camden Thursday night to meet the strong Bearden Bears. The Wolves will be without the services of Eddie Danner, star blocking back, whose injured knee, suffered in the first minute of play in the Gurdon game, has not healed sufficiently to allow his participation. F. C. Stuart will replace him in the backfield.

The Wolves have done nothing but block and tackle for the past two days, trying to overcome the lack of these two important fundamentals shown up so in the Gurdon game.

The Wolves are determined to a man to get revenge for the 28-0 setback handed them last year by the Bears.

Oklahoma Begins Prohi Graft Probe

"Protection" Money Paid for Liquor Transport, Is Charge

OKLAHOMA CITY.—(P)—Governor Marland asked Wednesday for a grand jury or court of inquiry in Atoka county to investigate reports that a deal involving protection payoffs for bringing liquor into constitutionally dry Oklahoma was developed at a clubhouse party near Stringtown in September, 1937.

Marland announced his decision after a conference with Dixie Gilmer, Tulsa county attorney. Gilmer said he did not present any evidence to the governor, but told him he believed affidavits and other documents assembled by the Tulsa World were of sufficient importance to be called to the governor's attention.

"I think sufficient has been said to justify a court of inquiry," Marland said.

Walter Biscup, reporter for the Tulsa World, came to the capital with Gilmer, but Marland declined to talk privately with the Tulsa newspaperman concerning information he had assembled in an investigation of the alleged whiskey ring.

The World published an article declaring that principals in the deal met at the Stringtown clubhouse and that other conferences were held at Fort Worth, Texas; Fort Smith, and Fayetteville, Ark.

17-Pound Baby Is Reported in U. S.

Record-Weight Birth Reported From Near Hattiesburg, Miss.

HATTIESBURG, Miss.—(P)—Dr. R. R. McNease of Sumrall, Miss., reported Wednesday that he attended the birth of a 17-pound son to Mrs. Alex. Deament, the wife of a farmer at Bassfield, Miss.

Dr. McNease said the boy was born October 14, was perfectly formed and was the largest baby he had ever seen at birth in his 26 years of medical practice. The mother and infant were getting along "O. K.," he said.

The doctor said he weighed the baby on a pair of "draw scales" in the Deament home.

Dr. H. B. Alsbrook of New Orleans, former president of the New Orleans Gynecological and Obstetrical Society, said:

"If the baby weighed 17 pounds at birth it is probably one of the largest ever born. We sometimes receive reports of births of extraordinarily large babies in the tropics but I have never heard of any weighing more than 19 pounds there."

"For a true record it is necessary to use two sets of approved scales."

Germany and Italy Czech Mediators

Czechoslovakia Accepts Their Offer Against the Hungarians

BUDAPEST, Hungary.—(P)—Czechoslovakia Wednesday night accepted Hungary's proposal that Italy and Germany arbitrate their territorial dispute, and it appeared probable the two totalitarian states would finally decide the new Czechoslovak-Hungarian border. There still were secondary differences between the stands of Prague and Budapest.

Acceptance of the principle of arbitration by Germany and Italy was contained in Czechoslovakia's latest proposals, received Wednesday night. Among the still existing differences was Czechoslovakia's insistence that occupation of the pure Hungarian areas wait until Germany and Italy and possibly other arbitrators decide on the occupation procedure. The spokesman described this as "unacceptable" by Hungary.

Hungary had demanded a plebiscite be held in eight disputed districts, including four big towns where the Czechoslovak note suggested settlement by arbitration.

The band bothers announce that they will give a Halloween party for the people of the town on Monday night, October 31, at the Old State Capitol Building. Admission price will be 5 and 10 cents and everyone is cordially invited to come and wear a "spook's" costume, they said.

The ladies of the town are sponsoring a second cake walk to be given Friday night, October 28, at the Old State Capitol Building. They cordially request the same splendid attendance and co-operation that made the affair of two weeks ago such a success.

The Presbyterian Auxiliary met on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. A. Wilson for the Home Mission program "We Follow Him" led by Mrs. Evelyn Hubbard. The meeting was called to order by the president. Seven members responded to roll call with a verse of Scripture and the minutes of the last meeting were read. Mrs. Hubbard read a call to worship and Mrs. Wilson led in prayer. The parts on the program were given by Mrs. Dudley, Mrs. Holt, Mrs. Muldrow and Mrs. Etter. Mrs. Hubbard concluded the program with prayer. The president announced that the White Cross quota for this year is bandages and gauze. The next program is a call to prayer and self denial in observance of the week of prayer and self denial for Home Missions, October 30 to November 6. The meeting will be at the church with Mrs. Wilson as leader. The meeting closed with the benediction.

GAS CONSUMERS

in

HOPE and SPRINGHILL

Now Your "Sense of Smell" Will Tell You If Your Gas Lines or Appliances LEAK GAS

The natural gas served Hope and Springhill is of such clean high quality that it has practically no odor; so little, in fact, that a great many people cannot detect it escaping through faulty connections on their own premises—SO WE ARE PUTTING AN ODOR IN IT!

Calodorant is a volatile oil which is added to the natural gas in vapor form in just sufficient quantity to give it an odor. It is consumed entirely in burning, and does not affect the heating value of the gas at all. Its odor is penetrating but not nauseating.

In an effort to further improve our service by assisting customers in locating possible leaks about their property, we are, on Monday, October 31, introducing into the gas mains supplying Hope and Springhill, a new product, "Calodorant," which will give the gas a distinctive odor, easily detected, without affecting in any way its value as a fuel.

If you have a gas leak on your premises, the presence of this odorant will call it to your attention. Notify our office of the leak immediately. We will respond to all such calls as rapidly as possible, in the order in which they are received. Repairs to property belonging to the gas company will be made by the company. The consumer will be responsible for repairs to the property belonging to the premises.

If there is any doubt as to the condition of the piping or equipment in your home we recommend that you call your plumber prior to the introduction of the odorant.
